

Our content management software (CMS) site ExtremExposures.net is a work in progress. We are blessed to have a constant flow of projects coming through the door and through the e-mail inbox, so content updates on the site take the backseat to our clients' projects. More detailed information about the product choices of our large format printing services is being added to help you make the best choice for your printing needs.

We recognize the site's importance to potential clients of Extreme Exposures, but we feel that this modernized, half finished web site still represents our company better than the old, outdated HTML web site of the past. Thanks for checking us out.

--

Mike Key, Owner
Extreme Exposures